

SPEAKERS BUREAU

They Want Our Rhythm, but Not Our Blues: African American Innovation through Pop Culture

A free public discussion with LaToya Brackett, author and professor

FEBRUARY
6
6:00PM

DETAILS

Reflecting on music, sports, language, food, and even hair, this talk calls audiences in beyond the rhythm to recognize the blues that made African American popular culture.

WHERE

General O. O. Howard House
750 Anderson Street Museum Drive
Vancouver, WA

This presentation is part of Humanities Washington’s Speakers Bureau program, in which cultural experts discuss history, politics, music, philosophy, and everything in between at venues around the state.

Humanities Washington opens minds and bridges divides by creating spaces to explore different perspectives. It is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization.

humanities.org

